

Kigen enable businesses to grow their Internet of Things rapidly through the SIM, eSIM and iSIM technologies and are pushing the boundaries in the industry. Working with a number of high profile customers globally, our growing business is looking for DevOps Engineers to join the team.

What you will be doing:

- Ensure that our services are always operational, by operating in the fine line between development and operations.
- That best practices for deployments are applied, by developing and maintaining an in depth understanding of what we have already done and are aiming to do.
- Aid other teams in driving out high-quality metrics of software quality, using market leading tools
- Automate as much as possible all aspects of integration, deployment, delivery and configuration
- Ensure that services remain healthy with high quality orchestration and checks
- Ensure that our deployments meet the requirement of a SAS accredited site.

What do we need:

- Proven experience working with Docker, Kubernetes, Linux and Jenkins (or similar).
- Demonstrable experience of CI/CD principles and methodologies.
- Previous experience with IaaS platforms such as AWS and Azure (or similar)
- Mastery of project source code and delivery management, including git, nexus (or similar), Ansible and Terraform
- A good understanding of Security concepts and processes.
- Ability to multi-task and prioritise.
- A real team player who aspires to our core values of: Passion for customer success; Be excellent to all; Think big, act fast.
